Join us for a Summer Art Class Series
July 10-25, 2015

In this unique six-session class series, children will have the opportunity to collaborate with artist-in-residence Annie Markovich to make a painting/collage of the reclining Buddha surrounded by animals of all kinds. The finished product will be on permanent display at Great Plains Zen Center. Children will draw and paint their favorite animal(s) with brushes and watercolor and mixed media under the guidance of Annie Markovich, an artist who has painted in Chicago, New York and Washington, D.C.

Annie enjoys working with children and believes that "children possess an innate ability to express in painting and drawing what they feel. Their art can remind the adults of the world and what it is to see with fresh eyes."

Classes will take place 2 – 3 PM on Fridays and Saturdays
July 10, 11, 17, 18, 24, 25

Children of all ages are welcome.
Children may attend all or some of the classes.
Suggested donation: $5 per class or $25 for all

Hosted by Great Plains Zen Center's Ripples program
